I am sorry for the delay in reporting. Things have been a little crazy here. I am only going to give the summary, not the details until things shake out further. We have (1) prevented the state legislature from adopting an anti-Patriot Act measure, after it passed the State Senate 23-2. It should not reappear for another year since the legislature just ended a special session. That involved numerous contacts with key legislators; (2) held a town hall style meeting, which I chose to do via a very popular radio call in show here, and which went quite well; (3) met with each member of the Portland City Council (or will have in the next few days) to try and prevent a City Council resolution against the Patriot Act. Although they will probably pass some sort of resolution, we have reason to believe that it will be so watered down that we will be able to live with it; (4) published an op-ed piece in the Oregonian, and assisted in the publication of two other pieces favorable to the Act; (5) gave various other speeches around the state.
